DAMPENED PLEASURES.

A DREARY DAY AT CONEY ISLAND. THE BEACHES ALMOST DESERTED-COMPLAINTS OF THE LANDLORDS.

Coney Island landlords were not happy yesterday. The multitudes that were expected there did not come. Saturday and Sunday are usually the best days in the week, and the hotel men had made provision for entertaining a great throng on both days, expecting to make up a part of the losses of the season. In this, however, they were greatly disappointed, as both yesterday and the day before proved to be damp, stormy and disagreeable at the seashore.

During the early part of the day the beaches were deserted, save by the regular guests of the hotels. Long trains of nearly empty cars rolled into the railway stations, and hotel proprietors and railroad officials wanted to know " if this thing was never going to end." " This thing " was supposed to refer to unfavorable weather. The hotel waiters gazed listlessly out on the chilly surf as if expecting orders for "hot stews" from the pores and sharks that are popularly supposed to cruise at those waters in search of lone bathers. Either because there were no lone bathers, and hence no sharks or porpoises, or because of high prices or some equally good reason, the orders did not come. Now and then a guest could be seen strolling along the beach arrayed in a waterproof and carrying an umbrella, but there was plenty of room, and the only fear these strollers had was that of getting lost in a fog. Later in the day a streak of sunshine made its appearice, and the landlords were as happy over it as if they id met a long-lost brother with a strawberry-mark on his left arm. The ray of sunshine proved a blessing, as it was supposed to indicate a change of weather. The it was supposed to indicate a change of weather. The rain ceased, and by the time the numerous cornet players had begun to blow their shrill blasts, small crowds had assembled around the music-stands. However much the hotel and railroad officials may mourn over the misfortunes of the season, the cornet players remain "as happy as big sunflowers that nod and bend in the breezes." No well-regulated Concy Island restaurant is now without its "famous" horn blowers. The supply is not equal to the demand. The worse the weather and the smaller the attendance the greater is the demand for these "artists" to attract the multitude. Men who a few months ago sought the approving smiles of the frequenters of the Bowery gardens now play to Concy Island audiences.

There was little bathing at any of the beaches. At Brighton at one time there were 100 or more persons in the water, but as the disagreeable weather returned towards evening, the beaches were again comparatively descreted. Hotel men complain that they have had few good days at Coney I-land this year. When the weather has been warm, land breezes have made it even warmer at the Island than in the city. Cool weather in the city has kept the crowds away most of the time. To add to these misfortunes competition has greatly increased, and still more is promised. The men who threaten the hotel proprietors with still more rivalry say that these complaints are unfounded and are intended only to keep away opposition and in order to maintain high prices.

WET WEATHER AT ROCKAWAY. VERY FEW VISITORS AT THE BEACH-THE NEW ROTEL TO BE OPENED SOON.

wet weather yesterday did not deter 3,000 persons from visiting Rockaway Beach. Perhaps half of these were young men and boys, and about half of the remainder were apparently the young men's sweethearts. Although the rain ceased at about halfpast 2 o'clock, the prospect at the beach was not very enlivening; in fact the weather was so unpromising that many persons took the early trains back to New-York.
The decks of the Rockaway steamers looked lonesome indeed on the most of their trips.

Everything was as quite around the big hotel yesterday as if it had never been a bone of contention to any A few persons wandered through it, admiring the nitude of its appointments from the lager-beer counter to the kitchen. A person who is supposed to know what the plans of General Husted, the new receiver, are, told a TRIBUNE reporter yesterday that he had no doubt the hotel would be opened to the public next Saturday. General Husted, he saki, had not made public his intentions as yet, because of the injunction which the counsel of Mr. Rice, the late receiver, had procured against his acting as a receiver. The case is to be settled this morning in the Supreme Court, Chambers. If the ion is favorable to Mr. Husted, he will probably open about 400 rooms in the west end of the hotel, including about 400 rooms in the west end of the hotel, including the octagonal bar, next Saturday. Mr. Burnap, a brother of the manager of the Manhattan Beach Hotel, and Mr. Chatterton visited the hotel last week. They thought that five days would be sufficient time to prepare the hotel for guests. If opened, the hotel will probably be conducted under their management. General Husted intends it to be on the American plan. It is proposed to name the hotel "The imperial."

For a mile or more east of the hotel the beach was dotted more or less thickly with people. Many entered the water; the breakers were not boisterous, but gentie enough even to tempt many women into them. Blue bathing suits bobbed up and down in the blue waves until the bathers, faces got blue with cold, when, with a farewell gambol on the shore, they would scamper through the spectators to the bathing houses with all the grace of a chicken caught in a thunder-storin. A queer jargon of sounds salutes the visitor's cars as be passes along the beach where negro minstrels, squeaking volins, planos out-of-tune, and wheezing organs combine with other mysterious sources to vex the air. One cannot help bedge thankful that they so mix and confound each other as not to be distinguished. Different tales were told by the smaller hotels as technic patronage last week, so that it was inferable that there had been a fair attendance. At the Seaside House, which is a favorite resort for permanent boarders, the clerk reported the rooms all full, and the last week a prosperous one. Among the guests registered were General Husted, Charles Leland, and Judge Mountfort. clerk reported the rooms all full, and the last week a prosperous one. Among the guests registered were General Husted, Charles Leland, and Judge Mountfort. A small, but noticeable, indication of faith in the future of the big hotel is the opening of a drug store and soda water fountain by Hegeman & Co., opposite the west end of the hotel. It is about the only sign of business life within a quarter of a mile.

Many persons find the ride across Jamaica Bay on the New-lork and Woodhaven Railway one of the most interesting features of a visit. The long succession of alternating spaces of water and grassy marsh, as one bowls along the trestle work is very pleasing. The lonely fishing huts here and there, and the sails of fishermen's boats, which seen at a distance, seem to be sailing through the grass give a charm to the landscape. And when it is remembered that the ride is made in clean, capacious cars with plenty of air, light and room, in the short space of thirty-five to forty minutes after leaving Hunter's Point, the popularity of the new route to Rockaway Beach is not surprising.

VISITORS AT GLEN ISLAND. A BOAT RIDE IN THE RAIN-PLEASURE UNDER DIF-FICULTIES-SCENES AT A CLAM BAKE. "Not so many passengers as usual to-day,

No. If it were a pleasant day we could not carry them all. The rain keeps them away to-day. I didn't expect as many as there are. I wonder people come out

This was the reply of the captain of the Laura M. Starin yesterday to a TRIBUNE reporter as the boat was making its way among the islands of the Sound to Gien Island. Despite the threatening weather the boat was well filled with pleasure-scekers, who preferred to take the chances of a wetting to remaining in the city. All the seats and camp-chairs in the cabin were taken. Although the day at this time—1 o'clock—was far from pleasant, the pleasure-seekers were in the happiest possible mood, and an air of freedom and ease prevailed.

A perpetual flow of conversation, laughter and common good feeling were the order of the day. There were many groups of young women and of children, who evidently were viewing the charming scenery on either side for the first time; their expressions of delight at the pioture before them as the boat glided through the water

When the boat reached Glen Island it was raining lany had come prepared with umbrellas and rubber overclothing; many had not. The latter looked disnayed when it dawned on them that they were out in a torm without sufficient protection. However, some-hing had to be done; so many made a "break" for the large concert pavilion, others ran for the dining-hall, while others shivered under the trees with the heaviest foliage. There was at least a variety in the day—a nov-elty in pleasure-seeking. At 2 o'clock the band at the city in pleasure-seeking. At 2 o'clock the band at the concert pavilion began to play. A good many were collected here, and they were determined, apparently, to have a good time despite their dampness. Schenk beer, the strongest drink to be procured at the island Sunday, was ordered in great quantities. Nearly all the tables on the verands were taken possession of; buskets and boxes were relieved of their contents, and in a short time all appeared to be as happy as the circumstances would possibly allow.

At the dining-hall the usual clam-bake was ready. There was a general resolve to get out of clams what could not be got from the promenades and pleasure-grounds. In consequence those shelligh suffered severely, and the clambakers were correspondingly happy. One young lad of ten made his first acquaintance with a clam-bake. He was a little surprised at being obliged to start in with soup, but having been assured by his father that clam soup was an essential part of a clam-bake he drowned his astonishment in the soup. When the huge bowls of clams were brought on, he looked still more bewildered, but having had the way opened to him, he soon learned how to prepare his clams.

"Why," he exclaimed, "it will take a peck of 'em for "Why," he exclaimed, "it will take a peck of 'em for "Why," he exclaimed, "it will take a peck of 'em for "the proper of the property of the property in the soup."

"Why," he exclaimed, "it will take a peck of 'em for a meal."

He proved equal to the emergency, however. He disposed of sonp, clams, lobster, fish and watermelon at the end with many heroism. An authority on lobster was a little dismayed when he tasted of his own lobster, the murmured to himself in the language of the mourner at the wake in the "Shanghraum".

He did not like the state or the taste of the creature.

Toward 3 o'clock the sun came out and the transformation was delightful. The prospect afforded from a was sample reward for the previous gloom of the day. The surrounding Islands were glittering with the sun upon them. In a short time the little steaming began puffing about; small boats, with their occupants, started out here and there; poople poured out upon the walk, and in a short time the island was alive with promendars, wandering here and there enjoying the refreshing sir, the flowers, the music and the innumerable pretty sights struched before them.

The class of people who visit Glen Island was pocially apoken of yesterday by one of the officers encoded there. "They are orderly and well behaved."

CHANGES IN COLLEGES AND SCHOOLS.

RESIGNATIONS AMONG THE MEMBERS OF THE FAC-ULTIES-REPAIRS AND ADDITIONS TO THE BUILD-

INGS-NEW COURSES AT THE COOPER UNION. In the course of the summer months, while college students and professors are enjoying their vaca-tions, it is customary to make many changes in the colleges. The present summer is no exception to the rule.

A TRIBUNE reporter recently called upon representatives of the leading institutions of learning in the city and found them all well pleased with the outlook for the coming year.

Probably the greatest change will be in the University of the City of New-York. This institution, chartered in 1830, and beginning its life in Clinton Hall, in Beekman-st., has had only four chancellors: Matthews, Frelinghuysen, Ferris and Crosby. Dr. Crosby resigned at the last commencement. Henry P. Mott, professor of International and Constitutional Law and Political Science, has also resigned and his place will be filled by W. Russell, a graduate of the university in 1875. This is Mr. Russell's first appointment as a college instructor. Nothing definite is known as to who will be the new Chancellor. Resolutions were passed unanimously by both the faculty and alumni inviting the Rev. John Hall, D. D., to accept the office. The resolutions, accompanied by many personal letters from warm friends o university, have been forwarded to Dr Hall in Europe, but no reply has been ceived. Another candidate has not been thought of, and should Dr. Hall decline the offer

Hall in Europe, but no reply has been received. Another candidate has not been thought of, and should Dr. Hall decline the offer the term will probably open without a Chancellor. Professor J. W. Draper, who was ill last spring and unable to attend to his duties has recovered and will return to his classes in the fall.

There are no changes in the building this summer. The institution is in great need of an increased endowment fund. A subscription has been started among the alumni, but no report has been made. The usual number of applicants for admission to the freshman class was examined in June. The term opens September 21, and another examination for admission will be held on the preceding day. Instruction is free in the academical departments.

At Columbia College workmen are busy blasting for the foundations of a new building to be used by the Law Department. It is expected that the transfer from Great Joues-st, will take place in about a year from now. As all the buildings now used are new, no repairs are necessary. Professor Naime's successor has not been chosen. More students were examined for admission in the Department of Aris than at any previous Jame examination. The standard of examination has been raised both for entering the college and for promotions in it. The cleetly exystem will be extended still further next year. With regard to the question of co-education, there is no prospect of having women admitted to the classes this year. The endowment fund is $5,000,000. The term commences the first week in October.

The building of the College of the City of New-York is undergoing an overhauling. The exterior has been relaid. There will be no change of instructors, but the text books will vary somewhat from those used last year. Judging from the spring examinations, there will be about 1,400 students at the opening of the year.

mand for lumber. I had expected this, and so had pre-pared myself with teams and drivers to haul lumber, and had a great many at work. We had to haul lumber some distance and over the worst country you ever saw. As I said, there was a great rush, and everything moved so rapidly no one thought anything of a horse and hardly of a driver. A great many drivers were soldiers just discharged, and they knew nothing about using a horse, so that the brutes suffered terribly. They used to fall down, that the brutes suffered terribly. They used to fall down, overcome by sheer exhaustion, in great numbers. The loads were heavy, the roads very muddy, and the oil mingling with this often made them almost impassable. Yet the lumber must be drawn, and drawn it was. As soon as a horse gave out his harness was removed, and he was left in his tracks to die. There was no time to remove him. He was useless. We didn't even stop to kill them, but drove right over them, and crushed the life out of them. That's killing, to be sure, but you know what I mean. It was an easy death for them.

"It was because of this that at length a certain piece of road, about two miles in length, was literally covered with the skius and bones of horses. There was a bend in the river where there was a meadow, and a good many horses which were able to walk were turned in here and abandoned. Farmers used to come here from the surrounding country and pick out the best of the poor beasts and take them home. After they had reated out and had had a chance to recruit they came out good farm horses."

"Didn't the loss of so many horses take off the profite!"

"Oh, no; high prices were paid for teaming. We thought nothing of making $25 a day. That was a regular thing. Money was easy. It was considered nothing for a man to step up to the bar to treat a few friends and hand out $5. He never expected change.

"There was a great deal of teaming demanded whenever a new oil district was opened up. The old ones were abandoned, houses were torn down, and within two days, perhaps, the whole thing would be moved. Oh, matters went with a rush, and so, as I said, you needn't look so hazy when I tell you how hard it was on the horses, and that I rode miles over their carcasses." overcome by sheer exhaustion, in great numbers. SANITARY CONDITION OF THE CITY. WHAT A PHYSICIAN SAYS OF THE STREETS-OB

STRUCTING THE GUTTERS - THE SLAUGHTER HOUSE DISTRICT.

HOUSE DISTRICT.

"What do you think of the general health of the city?" was asked of a prominent physician interested in sanitary matters recently.

"The death rate is still very high," he replied, "although the weather is fine and some improvements have been made in the general appearance and condition of the city. A moderate amount of repairs is in progress on some of the streets and guiters. Better street sweeping is being done, although some of the old sweepers seem as slovenly as ever, and few or none of the streets have been swept so clean as to prevent a plague of dust in dry times. If the streets, generally passable where little or no refuse is thrown, were once swept as absolutely clean as those swent by private enterprise, they would iong remain in a sightly and comfortable condition. It is noticeable that builders are more careful in some quarters about obstructing the gutters with their rubbish or materials. The first heavy rainstorm will flood all obstructed gutters and lead to the soakage of much foul water under the foundations of the houses. It is to be hoped that officials will not rest from their efforts in this direction. Every London policeman has a memorandum book and pencil conspicuously in view in his breast ctals will not rest from their efforts in this direction. Every London policeman has a memorandum book and pencil conspicuously in view in his breast pocket, and takes notes of all breaches of the laws and ordinances which he observes in his rounds. He hands in his book at the central office and receives another. Clerks make out the complaints and forward them to the proper bureau or authority. Very few prosecutions are required.

Yery few prosecutions are required.

"We are glad to see that some little movement is being made for the improvement of the slanghter-house district. Numberless imperfections and muisances abound there. The gutters in First-ave, and the side streets are not well adapted for drainage. Before one of the largest establishments of this kind in the city there is no sidewalk at all, and others are very dilapidated. Many of the cattle yards and pens are in a most filthy condition, and some of the cattle are treated very cruelly, being deprived of water and all comforts, so that the meat is much deteriorated before they are killed. Some places in Forty-seventhst, are especially objectionable. Some painting and repainting have been done, but the terrible missince from the leavings of the great manure yard has not been remedied. It would be better to throw clean earth on the whole, rather han to leave it as it now is; the earth would absorb all the fluids and gases and hecome thus good mould, or a fertilizer. Cellar and foundation earth is daily carried to the dumps at the Fort -sixth street pier, which might be utilized. It is inexcussable to leave the vile and ill-smelling place as it is now during the hot weather. The Sanitary Inspector of the t district should receive a sharp r. primand?

VENTURING BEYOND HIS DEPTH. TWO MEN DROWNED AT COMMUNIPAW-DRAWN

DOWN BY HIS COMPANION.

Three men, Edward Dalton, William Dunn and Timothy Mooney, yesterday afternoon went to the National Storage Company's docks, on the Communipaw shore, Jersey City, to bathe. None of them could swim, and for a time they remained in a place of safety. After a while they became more venturesome, and Dalton and Dunn began to wade out. Dalton, who was in advance of the others, was suddenly seen to sink out of sight, but in a few seconds reappeared on the surface, when it was evident from his desperate struggles that he was drowning. Dunn, without thought of danger to himself, hastened to his companion's assistance and reached him as he was going down for the third time. Dalton then seized Dunn and clung to him with the desperation of a drowning man. Both sank beneath the surface. The police were informed by Mooney, and Roundsman Holtic succeeded in recovering Dunn's hody.

It is supposed that Dalton waded into an excavation made by a dredging machine which has been at work there for a week or two. He was forty years old, and lived at No. 600 Grand-st., where he leaves a wife and several children. Dunn was thirty-four years old, inarried, and lived at No. 11 DOWN BY HIS COMPANION.

CITY LABORERS AND THE BUTCHERS.

The mechanics and laborers who are employed in the city departments of Public Works and Parks are the city departments of Public Works and Parks are realizing how difficult it is to move the municipal authorities in the matter of securing increased wages. At the last "mail" meeting of their committee with the Mayor, they received a letter from Mr. Grace, stating that he was in sympathy with them, that he would use his influence with the heads of the departments to secure for them for 1882 sufficient appropriations to raise their wages to the current rates paid to mechanics and laborers working for private employers, and that for the present he thought an increase of 10 per cent might be given. The men held a meeting yesterday at Central Hall, in East Forty-seventhst., to receive the report of the committee. It was st, to receive the report of the committee. It was resolved that a vote of thanks shou, a be given the Mayor, and if the 10 per cent increase were offered them they would receive it for the present; but they felt that it was not sufficient. It was decided to take measures to have the appropriations for 1882 made larger. Steps were also taken to make the present organization a permanent one.

According to prearranged plans the cattle butchers of this city struck yesterday morning for an advance of wages to 40 cents a head for the dressed cattle and 25 cents a head for their helpers. Many of the butchers were already getting these prices, but as all of them belonged to the union, a general strike was in de for the advance, which in any case does not exceed 10 per cent of the wages now paid. There was no disturbance. Nearly all the bosses There was no disturbance. Nearly all the bosses had large orders to fin to-day, and were obliged to accede to the striker's demands; many of them, however, say that they have only taken back men enough to do the necessary work until they can employ non-union butchers. One firm, that of Schwarzschild and Sulzberger, of East Forty-fifth-st., refused to employ the strikers, and took the men from its oleomargarine factory to do the work yesterday. A member of the firm stated that under no circumstances would the demand of the strikers be acceded to; they carn from $40 to $75 a week, and should be satisfied, he said, with such high wages; if they are not, he could employ other men. The strikers are confident of the und success of their strike even with this firm, which they say cannot get men from other places.

RACING FOURTEEN THOUSAND MILES.

RACING FOURTEEN THOUSAND MILES.

The English steamer Lord of the Isles, that arrived from Japan byway of the Snez Canal last Friday, laden with tea, sailed from Yokohama May 24, the Queen's birthday. On the same day the Gleneirtny, another English steamer with a similar cargo, left the same port, and a race of 14,000 miles for the New-York tea market was begun by the two vessels. Heavy bets on the race were made at Yokohama and at Chinese ports where they stopped, and in every case odds were given in favor of the Gleneirtny, as she has won similar races. In this case, however, some of the engineers on the Lord of the Isles had money at stake, which may account for extra efforts on their part.

"It was only a question of a little more coal, so we shoved it in," said the caief engineer to a Tribune reporter. "We made Amoy in three days and a half, and were delayed there a week loading our vessel, while the 'Glen's' cargo was all ready for her, and she sailed in two days. At Hong Kong we found she had started before we arrived, but we had gained on her a good deal. We reached Singal or just as the 'Glen' was leaving, and dun't see or hear of her till we were half way enrough the Suez Canal. She reached Suez, a day behind us. We would have been further ahead if a territic southwesterly storm had not delayed us in the Indian Ocean. Those white streaks that cover the smokestack were made by waves that broke over the vessel. We had good weather through the Mediterranean, but were delayed by the machinery getting out of orner. The 'Glen' steamed into Gibraltar just as "e were leaving there. Extra coal and work were used crossing the Atiantic, and moderate weather helped us. Just as we sighted Sandy Hook we thought a vessel in the distance ahead of us was the 'Glen' but we were happily disappointed. Our rival came into New-York six hours behind us and that's not a very big difference in a race of 14,000 miles. We made an average of eleven knots an hour."

A PARISH DIVIDED BY TWO PASTORS,

A PARISH DIVIDED BY TWO PASTORS.

The tribulations of the Church of St. Stanislans, at Forsyth and Stanton-sts., though at a temporary lull, are far from being allayed. Father Dutkievicz, who, until a few weeks ago, has been recognized as pastor of the church since last April, has yielded to the directions of the Cardinal, and confined the exercise of his office to the week days, while Father Grabowski reigns supreme Sundays. He led the service yesterday. The patisans of the two pastors tell very different stories. The adherents of Father Grabowski say that Father Dutkievicz came to this country in April and was allowed to exercise the duties of pastor in the church only temporarily, until a successor to the pastor who had just left it could be regularly appointed. Word came meanwhile that when Father Dutkievicz had attempted in England to raise some contributions of money on the foundation of the church, the Bishop of Liverpool had refused to recognize him as a priest. Father Grabowski was therefore called from Chicago by Cardinal McCloskey to fill the charge, but Father Dutkievicz clang to his place and would not give it up. His enemies even go so far as to say that Father Dutkievicz is about to be removed from the priesthood entirely by the Cardinal. His friends, on the contrary, say that he is shortly to be reinstated in the pastorship of the church.

Cardinal McCloskey declines to commit himself for the present with regard to his future orders. Each faction claims that a majority of the congregation is upon its side, and both seem confident of triumph. Father Dutkievicz's friends propose to present their pastor's case to the Cardinal at once, and they look for his speedy reinstatement in the pulpit of his church.

Martin Halloran, of Thirty-second-st. and Eighthave, went to call Saturday night upon Miss Amy Brown, at No. 137 West Thirty-fifth-st., and while there quarrelled with her about 50 cents. After a long and wordy war about the money, Halloran, in a violent fit of rage, seized the young woman about the waist and threw her out of the window of the rom, which was on the second story. She gave a loud and plereing shrick and fell with a heavy thud in the area beneath. Halloran was arrested and the young woman conveyed in an insensible condition to the New-York Hospital, where it was found that her shoulder-binde was fractured and that she had sustained general contusions and perhaps internal injuries. Halloran was taken before Justice Bixby, at the Jefferson Market Police Court, yesterday morning and was locked up without ball to await the result of the young woman's injuries.

STARVED BY HIS FATHER.

STARVED BY HIS FATHER.

A probable case of death from starvation was discovered yesterday afternoon in Brooklyn. The victim was James Burns, age nine. For a month he has been living with his inther, John Burns, in an outhouse at the rear of a dwelling at Park and Vanderbilitaves. Yesterday morning Burns, in a beastly state of intoxication, went with the boy to the yard at the rear of a beer-shop in Kent-ave., where they both fell askeep. A man who saw them noticed that the boy was ill and lungry, and he got something for him to eat. But the boy was unable to eat, and the father was then told to take him to a doctor.

Barns finally took his son to the rooms of James Swing, on the top floor of a tenement-house at No. 3298 Kent-ave. He was acquainted with Swing, and asked if the boy could stay there while he went for some clean clothes. On being told that he might Burns threw his coat on the floor and told the boy to lie on it. After a time Mrs. Swing noticed that the boy was sick, and did what she could for him, but waited for the father's return before calling nedical assistance. After an hour, the boy having been seized with convulsions, the police were informed and an ambulance surgeon was sent for, but before his arrival the boy died. Death occurred about 4 o'clock, two hours after the father left the place. Shortly after the boy died, beath occurred about 4 o'clock, two hours after the father left the place. Shortly after the boy died the father returned. He said he had no money to bury the child, and as he was grossly intoxicated he was arrested and taken to the Fourth Precinct Police Station. Burns was formerly a shoennaker, but had sunk from this trade to the occupation of going about with a junk-cart. About a mouth ago he separated from his wife, who was also dissipated, and with his son has lived since in a mere hovel. The boy has not been supplied with good food nor at regular times by his father, who tuns, indirectly at least, cansed his death.

EFFECTS OF THE DROUTH.

Long Island has suffered severely from the drouth draing the last two weeks. Potatoes that were planted early are yielding good crops, but those planted late are failures. Corn had been affected to a great extent in many places before the rain of Saturday and yesterday—the leaves had begun to curl, but as it has some time yet to grow a fair crop may be expected. Much loss has been sustained by the farmers who had their ground prepared for large quantities of cabbage, celery, and other late crops put in at this season of the year; they have been prevented from planting by the drouth, and the time has now so far advanced that the season will be too short, except for quick-growing plants. Cabbage and sweet corn that should now be ready for market have not grown any for a fortnight, and in some instances have become diminished in size. But the long-continued dryness has improved the prices, except for potatoes. Cabbage has advanced to $8 a hundred, cucumbers $1 50 a hundred, peas $1 25 a bag. Green corn is worth $1 25 a hundred ears, and is poor at that; potato onions $1 25 a bag-ket; beets and carrots, 25 cents a dozen bunches. The recent dry weather has been injurious to pasture land, and it is feared that the young timothy and clover will be killed in grain stubble. EFFECTS OF THE DROUTH.

Policeman McCoy, of the Twentieth Precinct, arraigned before Jostice Bixby, at the Jefferson Market Police Court ye terday morning, John Sweeney, of West Thirty-first-st., to answer to two charges of attempt at manslaughter. In the absence of the complainants, one of whom lives in Albany, the magistrate remanded the prisoner to the custody of the police until to-day. Sweeney was a barkeeper in the liquor store at Tenth-ave, and Thirty-first-st. July 5 a fight occurred in the place, in which Sweeney drew a revolver and shot Michael Ryan, of No. 504 West Thirtieth-st., in the arm, and James Daily, of Albany, in the head and side. Both men were at the time taken to the Roosevelt Hospital, where they suffered severely from their wounds. Sweeney escaped at the time and kept out of the way until saturday night, when, thinking the affair had blown over, he again appeared in the neighborhood. He was seen by Ryan, who caused the officer to arrest him.

FAILURES IN TORPEDO BOATS.

In speaking of submarine vessels and torpedo

In speaking of submarine vessels and torpedo warfare, a naval officer well versed in such matters recently said to a Thibune reporter:

"The earliest torpedo boat ever invented was, probably, that designed by David Bushnell, one of the officers of the American Army during the Revolution. The vessel was shaped like a watchease, and loaded so as to stand on its edge in the water. It was intended to be a submarine affair, operated by a man inside, who, by turning a crank, kept it in motion. Attached to the machine was a box containing 150 pounds of powder and a clockwork arrangement so contrived as to explode the powder at a given time. This box had a chain attached to it, at the end of which was a large pin. The idea was to run under the bottom of a vessel, drive the vin into her, then cast the box loose from the torpedo boat and get as far off as possible. The fleet of Lord Howe was at that time lying in New-York harbor, and Sergeant Ezra Lee agreed to make a trial of the new invention by attempting to blow up one of the Royal vessels. He was placed in the machine and ran it down the bay and under the bottom of Lord Howe's flagship, the Eagle. He then attempted to drive the pin into her bottom, but a heavy sheathing of copper prevented; and after staying under the ship for several hours, he cast loose the powder package and returned to the city. Had this attempt been successful it would have advanced forpedo warfare a hundred years.

"The Habsterd submarine boat was another failare. It was built after the Rebellion broke out, and is now lying at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. It is a fish-shaped aliair, with a screw in one end, and it was intended to be operated by men stationed inside, who were to propel it by turning a crank communicating with the screw. The operators were expected to be able to force the boat down or up at pleasure, and as it was not large enough to contain much air, were expected to be enough to entend the water to 'blow' occasionally, like a whale. When the affair was completed three men were plac Note any that could really be called a success Not any that could really be called a success. The torpedo service has sprung into being and taken an important part in naval operations, but submarine navigation is yet undeveloped, like aeriel travel. It is easy enough to design submarine boats on paper, but very hard to make them work in the wa er. Some kinds of torpedoes can be operated under water from the shore or from a vessel, but they are not properly submarine boats. Some under water from the shore of from a vessel, one they are not properly submarine boats. Some twenty years ago considerable was said of a sub-mar ne craft invented by a man in Chicago. It was intended to work much like the one described in Jules Verne's story of 'Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea,' but it did not succeed."
